of the Patient
Come First

Caroline S. Russell is the Associate Administrator for the surgical and procedural practice at the Mayo Clinic in Florida. She is responsible for providing oversight and direction for 14 surgical departments and divisions, including anesthesiology and transplantation, in alignment with institutional priorities, to develop and implement strategic and operating plans. She also serves as the administrative leader for the Clinical Practice, leading strategies to support clinical practice priorities across the Florida campus.

Caroline joined Mayo Clinic in 2016 as an Operations Administrator. She served as the Operations Administrator for several departments and divisions including Hematology and Oncology, Radiation Oncology, Gastroenterology and Hepatology, General Internal Medicine, Executive Health, Medallion Concierge Medicine, and Ophthalmology. Prior to joining Mayo Clinic, Caroline was the Administrative Director for the Brain Tumor Center and the Thoracic Oncology Program at Duke. Before serving in those roles, Caroline completed an Administrative Fellowship at Duke University Medical Center.

Caroline earned her bachelor's degree in commerce and business administration, from The University of Alabama. She also completed her Master of Science in Health Administration from the University of Alabama at Birmingham. Caroline is a Fellow in the Carol Emmott Foundation, an organization focused on accelerating the leadership capacity and impact of women leaders in health. She is board certified as a Fellow in the American College of Healthcare Executives and serves as Director-At-Large for the North Florida Chapter Board. Caroline also serves as President of the University of Alabama at Birmingham's School of Health Professions Women in Healthcare Leadership Executive Board, and serves on the Board for We Care Jacksonville, a non-profit focused on providing access to specialty health care for low-income and uninsured patients. In 2024 she was selected by the Jacksonville Business Journal as a 40 Under 40 awardee.

Caroline is an avid Alabama Crimson Tide fan, a Pure Barre enthusiast, and loves spending time with friends and family. Caroline and her husband, Bryan, live in Jacksonville Beach, Florida with their two dogs, Max, and Charlie.
